

Publication: Irish Examiner
Date: Wednesday, March 19, 2008
Page: 20
Extract: 1 of 1
Circulation: 55.948
Author:
Headline: Lost laptop service to launch gadget

Lost laptop service to launch gadget

Cork: A firm that offers a service reuniting lost laptops with their owners is set to launch electronic tagging technology following an R&D investment of €1.15m, supported by Enterprise Ireland.

Frank Hannigan, managing director of YouGetItBack.com, has received the support from Enterprise Ireland and private investors to develop a unique electronic tagging technology that will help users track lost or stolen laptops and even build up a warrant against the thief.

The company, based in Cork, has developed new software which it intends to introduce for the application layer of various mobile devices ranging from BlackBerry and Symbian devices to iPhone, Linux and Google Android devices.