

Publication: Metro

Date: Tuesday, February 12, 2008

Page: 3

Extract: 1 of 1

Circulation: 75.381

Author:

Headline: Now, where did I put my girlfriend

Now, where did I put my girlfriend

GIRLFRIENDS will be pleased by a survey which found that men don't want to lose them – but they're less likely to be thrilled with being labelled 'portable assets'. The survey, by Irish lost-and-found company YouGetItBack.com, found that 40 per cent of men named a girlfriend as the number one 'portable asset' they would least like to lose, nearly 20 per cent ahead of items such as wallets, keys and phones. 'The results showed that while material possessions are highly valued, the thought of losing one's partner caused most concern,' said Frank Hannigan, managing director of YouGetItBack.com.